A simple story of two old fogies in a retirement home bickering about the mundane life they lead. One is a rusty old accountant who prefers to stay in his pajamas all day, the other a suave, debonair fellow who loves to dance. They find a new topic of bickering—an aging "glitzy" movie star who "moves" in- which will provide many hearty laughs and leave you with joy in your heart. (Ron Clark is a successful and hilarious writer who has written for nearly every comedian from Jackie Gleason to Mel Brooks).
